**EMERGING ISSUE

>>What are the Motivational Underpinnings for Many Student Learning, Behavior, and Emotional Problems?

Student disengagement, acting out behavior, bullying, truancy, dropouts/pushouts – no one doubts that motivation plays a key role in all this. In many cases, it is a causal factor; in all cases, it is a key facet of strategies to prevent and correct problems.

While the issue was raised some time ago, we are detecting (and promoting) a growing concern about what professional preparation and development programs teach and do not teach with respect to motivation. In particular, there is the matter of how well they distinguish between interventions that are oriented to intrinsic motivation vs. those that are oriented to extrinsic motivation. Generations of teachers and support staff have been trained in the use of reinforcement theory with its emphasis on extrinsic controlling strategies. This tends to be the major focus of efforts to “manage” behavior. Just emerging is growing advocacy for professional preparation and development programs to incorporate a focus on applying what has been learned over many decades of research on intrinsic motivation and psychological reactance.

A sense of the matter is found in a 2006 research review by Vansteenkiste, Lens, and Deci.* In discussing autonomy-supportive versus controlling social environments, they suggest that in externally controlling contexts teachers emphasize “overtly coercive strategies, such as salient reward contingencies, deadlines, and overtly controlling language.” By way of contrast, in autonomy-supportive contexts teachers “empathize with the learner’s perspective, allow opportunities for self-initiation and choice, provide a meaningful rationale if choice is constrained, refrain from the use of pressures and contingencies to motivate, and provide timely positive feedback.”

What’s your view about what professional preparation and development programs need to teach about motivation? Send your perspective to ltaylor@ucla.edu

*U. S. SENATE BRIEFING STRESSES “REMOVING BARRIERS TO LEARNING: THE ROLE OF SCHOOL-EMPLOYED MENTAL HEALTH SERVICE PROVIDERS”

As part of planning for the reauthorization of SAMHSA and the No Child Left Behind Act, a Senate briefing on March 21 focused on school-based mental health and the link to student success. Co-sponsors included the National Association of School Psychologists, the American Counseling Association, American School Counselor Association, School Social Work Association of American, and Senators Edward Kennedy and Pete Domenici.

*RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN NONSCHOOL FACTORS AND STUDENT ACHIEVEMENT

A report from the National Center for Educational Statistics reports on the relationship of six nonschool factors to student achievement. The six factors are: highest level of parents’ education; high occupational status of parents; number of books at home; immigrant status, and family structure. 4/11/06 <http://nces.ed.gov/>

*HURRICANE EVACUEE STUDY FINDS DECLINING HEALTH

“Families displaced by Hurricane Katrina are suffering from mental disorders and chronic conditions like asthma and from a lack of prescription medication and health insurance at rates that are much higher than average. The study, conducted by the Mailman School of Public Health at Columbia University and the Children's Health Fund, is the first to examine the health issues of those living in housing provided by FEMA (650 families living in training or hotels.) 34% of displaced children suffer from conditions like asthma, anxiety and behavioral problems, compared with 25 percent of children in urban Louisiana before the storm. Nearly a quarter of school-age children were either not enrolled in school at the time of the survey or had missed at least 10 days of school in the previous month. Their families had moved an average of 3.5 times since the storm." 4/18/06 New York Times. Http://www.nytimes.com

*DOES MAYORAL TAKE OVER OF SCHOOLS WORK?

"The mayors have done pretty well in getting the books and infrastructure in order.... But the real test is student achievement, and there's little research so far to show how well takeovers work.... In Chicago and Boston, for at least the first few years, test scores rose, especially in elementary and middle schools.... But often the curve flattens out after a few years. An in high schools, real success has proved much more elusive." 4/18/06. Http://www.npr.org

*STRUGGLING STUDENTS WANT VOCATIONAL EDUCATION

"The idea of combining traditional academics with career training is making a comeback, and a poll suggests that it is popular among one particularly important group: struggling high school students. A poll of California 9th and 10 graders, conducted for the James Irvine Foundation, found that 6 in 10 students didn't particularly like school and weren't motivated to succeed. But of those disaffected students, more than 90% said they would be more motivated if their school offered classes relevant to their future careers." 4/6/06. Los Angeles Times

*SCHOOLS CUT BACK ON OTHER SUBJECTS TO PUSH READING AND MATH

"A survey by the Center on Education Policy found that since the passage of NCLB, 71% of the nation's 15,000 school districts had reduced the hours of instructional time spent on history, music, and other subjects to open up more time for reading and math. The practice, known as narrowing the curriculum, has become standard procedure in many communities." 3/26/06 New York Times. Http://www.nytimes.com

"Only two subjects? What a sadness.
That's like a violin student who's only permitted to play scales, nothing else,
day after day, scales, scales, scales.
They'd lose their zest for music."

**MONTHLY FOCUS FOR SCHOOL TO ADDRESS BARRIERS TO LEARNING

>> May – Time to Help Students and Families Plan Successful Transitions to a New Grade or a New School

As the school year draws to a close, there is a new focus for school staff, students, and families. What comes next? Grade-to-grade transition? Moving to middle school? high school? a new school? Leaving high school? All transitions call for well-conceived programs and connections focused on clarifying options, making decisions, and aligning adequate support during the period of transition.

In addition to the usual "orientation" sessions, programs are needed that

- >provide closure related to what the student is leaving behind
- >enhance articulation between the old and the new
- >welcome newcomers and ensure they have the type of social support that facilitates positive acceptance and adjustment in the new setting
- >assess transition success
- >implement timely corrective interventions when transitions are not successful

To explore the rich array of possible transition interventions and access resources, see the Center Quick Find Online Clearinghouse topic: “Transitions Programs/Grade Articulation/Welcome” at http://smhp.psych.ucla.edu/qf/p2101\)01.htm01.htm) – There you will see links to Center materials including:

>>Requests for information to help with planning for the next school year –

Many of you are involved in discussions related to setting priorities for the next school year. Decisions about budgets, personnel, staff development, and more are being made. If you need any help, support, or information to take to such leadership meeting related to the importance of learning supports to address barriers to learning, please let us know. We have, for example, been asked about cost-benefit analyses, support staff roles and functions, policy statement examples, etc. These are important opportunities for infrastructure development, and policy and system change. These are especially important for schools on the lists of “needing improvement.”

>Response to emerging issue: How Many High Poverty Schools Are Highly Performing?

“I left working in schools because of my frustration with the administration and how many of the funds were going to curriculum. We certainly have achieved certain things... I haven't forgot the vision and the Douglas Harris article just makes me mad all over again. I have been composing another letter to the editor in my head for months so maybe this article will help spur me on...”

>We were asked to share the following:

(1) A new report on school dropouts entitled, Making Good on a Promise: What Policymakers Can Do to Support the Educational Persistence of Dropouts. Published by Jobs for the Future. “Much of the evidence contradicts what most educators believe about school dropouts. The Executive summary states: Dropping out is not confined to a small group of young people. Socioeconomic status - which is based on parents' income and education -rather than race is the key indicator for dropping out. Most dropouts are remarkably persistent in their drive to complete a secondary education. Most dropouts pursue postsecondary education, but despite their persistence few earn degrees. Reform K-12 education accountability systems to emphasize a dual agenda: higher graduation rates and higher academic standards. Address the equity imperative by creating new pathways to college in low-income communities. Redesign dropout ‘recovery’ programs to build on student aspirations and reflect the demands of the knowledge-based economy.”

The Center for Social and Emotional Education (CSEE) is learning about the range of ways that this is being done. (3) Announcement about: "Breaking the Silence; Teaching the next Generation about Mental Illness" (BTS). BTS is working with Dr. Fred Kaeser, Director of Health Education, Region 9, NYC BOE to educate students about mental illnesses. BTS teaching packets along with staff presentations on BTS and the importance of mental illness education are being given to NYC guidance counselors in Region 9. "The BTS teaching packets consistently receive high praise from teachers, educators and mental health advocates coast to coast, we are grateful for the vision and support of the Mental Insight Foundation (MIF) which has given us the opportunity to share an exciting model for mental illness education with NYC public school guidance counselors and students in this trailblazing district," explains Janet Susin, NAMI Queens/Nassau President and BTS Project Director. BTS are user- friendly teaching modules for grades 4-12 designed to separate fact from fiction; combat the stigma of mental illness and promote early treatment. BTS fulfills the S.A.V.E (Safe Schools Against Violence in Education) legislation in NY State and meets the national health education standards for character education and violence prevention.
